What is rateable value?

Rateable values are used to work out how much to charge properties that do not have water meters. They were decided by the Valuation Office and can be different for every property. Rateable values were then forcen in 1990 when council tax was introduced, and they have stayed the same since. If you would prefer to be charged for the amount of water you actually use, you can apply to have a water meter fitted for free.
